Photo editing tools are available for virtually every type of digital imaging device, from basic point-and-shoot cameras to professional, DSLR cameras. See Chapter 5 to find out the differences and how to use your camera's settings to create great images. But the real question is whether you should buy Photoshop in the first place. The answer is that it may not be worth the money if you don't use the program frequently or think you might want to get into it. I would like to know if there is a way to accomplish this using an UPDATE statement. My sql statement looks like this: UPDATE TABLE SET FLUIDSIZE = '$1', FLUIDTYPE= '$2', FLUIDSTAMP = '$3', FLUIDLOCATION= '$4', FLUIDCONNECTOR= '$5' WHERE FLUIDID = '$6'; The $6 is the id of the product. In the specific example that I am working with I am only updating 1 product, but my database is huge with many products. Each one has a specific amount of fields that might or might not contain anything. I want to be able to capture the vin, make, model, etc and insert it into the database. A: No, that is not possible with a single UPDATE statement, because UPDATE is a statement to update records. You could use INSERT INTO...SELECT to do so. Inserting just one row at a time can be done with a single statement. EDIT: After reading the new question, this will not solve the problem: INSERT INTO TABLE SELECT * FROM TABLE WHERE FLUIDID = '$6' This still requires one statement, and it will leave an empty record in the database. The original question was asking about updating existing records, which cannot be done with a single

Another anonymous questionnaire for the development of a stress-management strategy was also distributed among nurses who had worked in ICUs for more than four years. Forty-one questionnaires were returned.
